	Testing Geospatial Predictive Policing Strategies: Dosage Distribution Enforcement Model and Geospatial Impact Study. The San Antonio Police Department (SAPD) currently allocates resources based on analytical models that capitalize on pattern and trend recognition and response. This study proposes a patrol experiment to examine saturation based policing by distributing varied enforcement levels (dosages) within the White House designated Promise Zone on the east side of San Antonio. Adding to the predictive toolkit, it is proposed that the SAPD's Automated Vehicle Locator (AVL) data and high resolution Pictometry be harnessed in conjunction with the vast amount of data currently supporting the Department's existing Patrol Resource Allocation Model.	U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ), Office of Justice Programs (OJP), National Institute of Justice (NIJ)	4/25/14	Mark Knutson/ James Glass	SAPD submitted application for $360K.
