Historic Houston Street contains many examples of San Antonio’s spectacular commercial architecture of the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

As you walk down this historic street you will encounter a series of eight kiosks between N. Alamo and S. Santa Rosa Streets. These kiosks highlight the history and architecture of the many significant structures on Houston Street.

The kiosks are former public telephone stands that have been adaptively reused for this project. There are informative panels on both sides of each kiosk, and each panel will identify nearby historic points of interest.
