

Work and play on green day

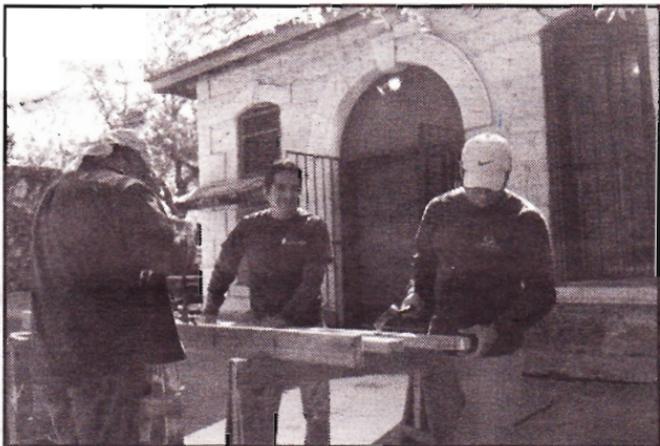

AIA members and guests enjoyed a green-themed documentary in the park on Earth Day.

The American Institute of Architects (AIA) San Antonio chapter's Committee on the Environment (COTE) celebrated Earth Day in Brackenridge Park.

On Apr. 20, 12 COTE volunteers helped out the Brackenridge Conservancy by cleaning up the pump house, planting new flowerbeds, and putting down fresh mulch. When their volunteer work was done, the COTE members along with members of the conservancy hosted their annual COTE Cinema in the park.

Approximately 50 people and their families attended the documentary screening of "Deep Green: Solutions to Stop Global Warming Now." This was the first time the event had been held at Brackenridge, and COTE hopes to make it an annual Earth Day tradition at the park.

-mp

Doing their part to clean up the environment on a local level, volunteers worked on the pump house at Brackenridge Park.

